BILINGUAL LEARNERS' DICTIONARIES

What is a bilingual learner's dictionary?
A bilingual dictionary written exclusively for learners of English, and not for English-speaking learners of a foreign language.

What difference does that make?

- We can focus the entire contents of the dictionary on telling learners in detail what they need to know about English.
- Notes in the user's own language provide targeted help with grammar, usage, and vocabulary points where it is most needed.

What makes them learners' dictionaries?

- The entries are selected on the basis of frequency and relevance to the learner's level and needs.
- They are compiled by a team who have experience of teaching English in the relevant country, who know the exams that students are preparing for, and understand their problems.
- They share the features of our monolingual learners' dictionaries, including:
  - reliability guaranteed by corpus research.
  - active help with using English as well as understanding it.
  - numerous example sentences reflecting contemporary usage.
  - cultural notes, study pages, and appendices on areas of particular interest.

How do they fit in with monolingual dictionaries?

Many students like to use a bilingual dictionary, especially for self-study. By using one with the same philosophy, conventions, and structure as the monolingual, they find it easier to move between bilingual and monolingual.
